Overview

There is a direct relationship between the development and maintenance of our neighborhoods and communities, and likelihood that crime, fear of crime, and blight will take place. Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) is a strategy emphasizing proper design and use of the built environment to create an improvement in the quality of life, and reductions in crime and the fear of crime. Your application of CPTED to your home or business can have an immediate impact on your safety and security.

The Code Enforcement Unit is available to conduct CPTED assessments at your property. Officers also host occasional CPTED classes open to the public. If you are interested in an assessment or wish to attend the next scheduled class, contact Code Enforcement for further information.
